Pidha stools

Pidha stools, or pidha chowki, are traditional wooden stools used in India for centuries. These stools come in a variety of shapes and sizes and are often intricately carved and decorated. Their design is quite distinct, featuring a flat top with four legs, sometimes with a fifth leg in the middle for additional support. Pidha stools are typically made of hardwood and designed to be stable, comfortable and durable.

Pidha stools are often used in Indian homes and temples, and are also used as seating for eating and other activities. Their design is highly functional, as they can be placed in tight spots and moved around easily. They are also highly decorative, with many being carved with intricate designs and patterns. Some pidha stools even feature silk clothes or different types of rope.
